CULTURAL DIPLOMACY & THE COLD WAR

During the Cold War, cultural diplomacy emerged as an important aspect of relations between states across the globe. Exhibitions, concerts, performances, book readings, and film screenings captured the ideological message of each side, as they showed conflicting “ways of life” in the global Cold War context. This talk interrogates the importance of Cold War culture in a global perspective, tracing the cultural contacts of small Bulgaria from the British Museum and NYC’s Metropolitan to New Lexington, Ohio, to Mexico City, New Delhi, and Lagos.

PANELISTS:

Nicholas Breyfogle
Associate Professor
Department of History; Director, Goldberg Center

Theodora Dragostinova
Associate Professor
Department of History

Register at: https://go.osu.edu/cliosocietycoldwar

THURSDAY
DECEMBER
9
4:00-5:00 p.m.
Live Streamed