

MEDIAEVAL WOMEN'S RIGHTS: SETTING THE STAGE FOR TODAY

The medieval church gave birth to the misogynistic rhetoric that continues to hinder women's progress in the West today, but it also witnessed the first real "feminist" rumblings of discontent.

Medieval women were not content to be victims of oppression: they challenged the rhetoric, and when that didn't work, they found ways to work around it. Come hear historian Sara Butler speak about women in the Middle Ages and learn how they faced many of the same challenges that we do today.

Sara Butler is Professor and King George III Chair in British History at The Ohio State University. Her research and teaching area of specialization is medieval legal history.

MONDAY, MARCH 8, 2021, 12:00 P.M. (ONLINE)

REGISTER AT: HTTPS://GO.OSU.EDU/MARCH8CLIO

This Clio Lecture is presented by the Bexley Public Library and the Ohio State College of Arts & Sciences.

THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY