

Sample Course of Studies for History BA / East Asian Studies MA degree

NOTE:

- 1) Distribution requirements within the major program and M.A. program are noted at the head of each column, provision of geographical and chronological breadth as well as development of basic research and critical reading skills in the case of the History B.A. Major, and the need for language training, a concentration (thematic, geographic, etc.), work outside the concentration, and understanding of the role of interdisciplinary area studies for the M.A. program.
- 2) The following is but a single example of a BA/MA course of study, one of many possible variants in the composition of both a B.A. and an M.A. program.
- 3) Shorter times to degrees are possible with intensive study and longer times are possible for those who start language study later in their careers.
